

The content of Genesis 50 ends the book with the burial of Jacob in Canaan and the death and burial of Joseph in _____. There is an ominous gloom associated with this closing chapter and no wonder, since man's fall in the garden the entire book has emphasized sin and death. However, there is another side to this epitaph; it contains a testimony, a challenge to _____ God. Consider Joseph: he has lived faithfully, always believing God's word to be true. No matter what, in times of trouble or success, Joseph remained steadfast. Today, as we conclude our study of Genesis, we will finish with _____ and not despair. We will remember that our expectation is from God, the faithfulness of his character and the surety of his promises. In this closing chapter of the book of beginnings, we will focus on...
